List of Perfumes For The Patron Innate Group

April 27, 2025

The classification of perfumes for the innate Patron group was created by the authors of this website. The purpose of this classification is to demonstrate the relationship between different perfume odors and innate group, different types and temperaments. This list of perfumes is an extension of the page "A Typological Classification Of Perfumes For Innate Types".

Historically, a great deal of time has passed since it was first thought of that they could use natural scents and components to put on their body or clothing. The purpose of this is to please your loved one with some new scent that may even be uplifting to others as well.

As it happens, not all plants provide a lot of essential oils that are in the composition of various perfumes. That's why some perfumes also have synthetic components to add or replace some scent. In their class, perfumes are stronger because the percentage of essential oils in them is higher than in colognes or toilet water. But the most interesting thing that led the authors of this website and typology to classify perfumes is that different perfumes tend to create a different image and atmosphere. And this image may or may not appeal to certain types.

Before we begin, be aware that the authors of this classification are in no way affiliated with the brands of the perfumes mentioned. Also, the authors do not sell the perfumes of these brands. The list includes perfumes, toilet water and colognes. A list of perfumes is not a recommendation for you. You can choose any perfume you want, because these perfumes are marketed to all people without exception.

What is the basis of the classification for Patrons?

As with the other innate groups, classification for this group was done manually and subjectively. But the classification was based on the authors' personal experience and understanding of typology, as well as taking into account such nuances as group differences, innate types, temperaments (sanguine, choleric, phlegmatic, melancholic), and even the theoretical age of types (young, middle, old). No classification of perfumes by gender was made. You can study specific perfumes yourself on the manufacturer's website.
